

Traditional Mass Scripture

*Ferial readings from the Supplemental Weekday Lectionary of 1967
(in blue); Advent has two Isaiah readings, Easter has two Epistles.*

*Sunday Old Testament readings from the Prophecy cycle of the Historic Lectionary [as reconstructed in the Lutheran Service Book]
(in red)*

Epistle readings for the ferias of Lent and Ember Days would need to be added

*Note in the Missal on the number of Sundays after Pentecost:

If there are more than twenty-four Sundays after Pentecost in any particular year, then after the 23rd Sunday one continues with the Sunday Masses that did not occur after Epiphany in that year (depending on how early or late Ash Wednesday was); on these "extra" Sundays at the end of the liturgical year, one uses the readings and prayers of the Masses for the 3rd, 4th, 5th, and/or 6th Sundays after Epiphany; but the year always ends with the Mass of the “24th” Sunday after Pentecost. The Supplemental Weekday lectionary, however, gives separate readings for these additional weeks (up to 28th) after Pentecost.

These Commons have multiple other “alternate” readings suggested that merely reference a reading already in the Propers. It is unclear when these would be used; perhaps for local calendars. It should be also noted that, in the Proper of Saints, there are some feasts in the Missal (especially for the Doctors) where the readings are written out in full, even though, upon further investigation, they are identical to the readings of the Common. These are not listed repeated here, as those lessons are already listed in the Commons. However, when only one of the lessons for a feast was truly Proper and the other was Common (as sometimes happens), both have nevertheless been given.

This feast has been superseded by another being placed on the same day, but for its antiquity it is still given in the Missal and has proper readings of its own. It may be used for a votive private Mass, or sometimes even two Conventual Masses were said.

*Many of the readings on feasts, either proper or from the Commons, may be replaced optionally with the ferial readings from the Supplemental Weekday Lectionary of 1967: “This Weekday Lectionary contains the readings approved by the Holy See, at the request of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, for use at Masses of class III and class IV which do not have their own proper readings.”

“This Weekday lectionary may be used on certain class II days which are indicated in the lectionary itself, and in all Masses of Class III or IV, whether Masses of the season, of a saint, or votive Masses, which do not have their own strictly proper readings, that is, readings in which mention is made of the mystery or person being celebrated.” (Instruction, Congregation of Sacred Rites, May 4, 1967, No. 2)

“Since the readings are chosen from successive parts of the respective biblical books, in a kind of lectio continua, it may be useful to add a reading which has been omitted (e.g., because of conflict with a feast of class I or II) on the previous day and join it to the passage appointed for the particular day. Or a reading may be anticipated in this fashion and be added to the assigned reading, if it must be omitted on the following day. In any case the unity of the biblical passage should be respected.”
